Music Stained Glass Window Art

An often repeated quote about music is that it is “the language of the soul.” Anyone who has ever listened to hymns or carols in church is certainly well aware of the powerful emotions the sound of instruments and sweet voices praising the Lord can evoke. Because of the universal appeal of music and its importance to the Christian faith, it is a wonderful theme to consider when you are shopping for church stained glass. While you could choose stained glass panels that simply show harps, horns, or organs, other church stained glass windows for sale include the theme of music in a subtler way. Ecclesiastic stained glass windows might, for example, show angels playing various instruments or people holding hymn books while they worship God through song.

Music and the Christian Faith

It is no coincidence that so many Christian stained glass windows incorporate some reference to music. There are numerous mentions of its various forms throughout the Scriptures. Just a few of them are outlined below:

- Singing: There are several references to praising God through song in the scriptures and psalms. Just one example is found in the Book of Isaiah (52 : 8-9). The Lord’s followers are urged to “break forth into joy” and “sing together.”

- Trumpets and horns: These instruments deserve special attention because they have been traditionally associated with notions of royalty. God's kingdom and Christ's position as king of kings are both ideas presented in the Bible. In the First Epistle to the Thessalonians, it is stated that "the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of an archangel, and with the trumpet of God."
- Musical instruments: References to a variety of other instruments are also found in Christian writings, usually as a means of giving praise. Consider this passage from the Book of Ezra: "the priests stood in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites, the sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the Lord."

The music that fills your sanctuary every week is a delight to the ears, and religious stained glass windows featuring this theme will appeal to the visual senses. Perhaps most importantly, both of these art forms have the power to speak directly to the soul.
